

Bats from Mampam Conservation

Written by Administrator

Saturday, 07 July 2007 09:54 - Last Updated Friday, 08 April 2011 00:16

Bats are smelly and they spread ebola and other nasty diseases. But we love them and we need them for all sorts of reasons, and woe betide anybody who so much as shouts at a bat in the European Union; you face imprisonment and a hefty fine.

Here you will find details of our work on bats in Ghana, Madagascar, the Philippines and the U.K. Our studies aim to develop accurate methods of assessing highly diverse bat communities in very complex environments whilst causing minimum disturbance to the animals.